WAS SICK THIRTY YEARS

Bowie, Tex.—The remarkable case of Mrs. S. J. Embry, who lives near here, is attracting attention, on account of her restoration to health after many years of suffering. She tells of it in a letter as follows:

"During the past thirty years I have suffered greatly from nervous troubles and my health was badly run down. Lately I learned of your cod liver and from tonic, Vinol, and hegan taking it. "I have used several buttles and funproved so fast that I at once recommended it to two friends who were in poor health. My case was complicated, but Vinol did wonders for me. Every woman who suffers from nervousness and weakness should take Vinol and recover her health."

A color scheme of pink and green was carried out most effectively in the decorations, and in the lee cream and cake which were served. Frozen punch was served also during the evening. No such apology may be offered for the flirtatious married woman. She is old enough to know better. She is wise to the ways of the world and realizes the irreparable wrong she is doing. She has her husband. She is not a pot hunter. She slays for the cruel pleasure of killing.

The filrtatious married woman is both fool and knave—fool because she risks so much for so little, and knave because she is disloyal to the bread because she is disloyal to the bread after its soul had fled.

Risks Much for Little.

The filitatious married woman is both fool and knave—fool because she risks so much for so little, and knave because she is disloyal to the bread she cats, and betrays her husband in his own honse. The professional adventuress is not so despicable a character as the married woman who uses her weding certificate as a clock of respectability to cover her sentimental affairs with men.

The adventuress at least fights in the open, under her own colors, and

The adventuress at tenst tights in the open, under her own colors, and takes the risks herself, while the wife hides behind her husband, and carries on her guerrilla skirmishes from the safe shelter of her home. Which is a nefarious proceeding, and not according to the code of civilized warfare between the sexes. It should be every woman's first duty

It should be every woman's first duty to keep her honor white and name unstained. This obligation is doubly binding upon her when she marries, and voluntarily takes into her keeping a man's honor and a man's name. She should be even more careful to keep them unsulfied than she did her own.

A Woman's Privilege.

A woman may conceivably have a right to do as she pleases with her own. It may be her privilege to throw her pearls in the mud if she fancies, and trample them underfoot, but nothing could condone her fault if she threw away the most precious jewel that a man had, and that he had trusted to her. The black treachery of bringing disgrace on a name that had been given reverently into her keeping should be enough to make any married woman with a gleam of honor, or honesty or common decency in her soul, run straight.

what should be done with a filtratious wife?

Something with boiling oil in it is about the punishment to fit the crime in such a case.

Her Amazing Folly, Her Amazing Felly,

And the amazing thing about the filiriatious wife is her folly in risking so much for so little. I have in mind this minute a woman married to a man who adored her, and who lavished the most beautiful and tender attentions upon her. In addition, being wealthy he gave her fine town and country houses, automobiles and horses and carriages, diamonds and costly clothes, everything that money could buy. This woman had nearly grown children and apparently all that heart could desire, except an insatiable craving for the admiration of many men.

She was one of the firstatious wives.

f many men. She was one of the flirtations wives. She was one of the hirtatious wives. In truth her filtrations never went beyond sentimental talks and letters and a few orchids from her admirers, but one fine day the husband overheard another man making love to his wife, and a search of her desk revealed a pile of love latters such as no married were of love letters, such as no married wo-man abould receive, and the result in that the once adored wife has lost hus-band and children, and wealth, and is how in exile from home, living on a moderate penalon.

That's the way one filtriations wife not here as many another time.

That's the way one flirfations wife got hers, as many another finds head ending in Reno.

The flirfations wife is the worst of traitors to her sex because she must either pray on other women's husbands, or else rob some girl of a husband, and make every man afraid to marry by lowering in his eyes the standard of wemanhood.

Not all of the alde-stepping from the straight and narrow path is done by husbands, even in the most respectable, church-going circles.
